The Submarine

By Sophia Wilson

The Carnegie Science Center is located in Pittsburgh, PA and is a wonderful Science center. That was where our class recently went for a field trip.

In the river next to the Carnegie Science Center there is submarine, which you can sign up for a time to take a tour. The submarine smelled pretty bad but surprisingly looked good for how old it is! First, on the right of the narrow hallway, there was a metal shower that had a door. Then, you climbed through a small door to get to the kitchen, and so on down the hallway. To find more out about the Carnegie Science Center you must take a visit!

The submarine actually went under water but you didn't ride in it, you just got on board and went with the flow of the tour!

There are so many more exhibits to see and things to do, within minutes of arriving you won't want to leave. Everything is fun, there is so much truth behind the science, it almost feels like magic. A one in a million chance to see a fish through the small open window of the submarine.

It sure was a fun experience, the submarine was the most fun part! Check it out!
